2019 CED HONORS DAY

FRIDAY, SEPT 6, 2019

College of Environment + Design
UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA

INTRODUCTION BY DEAN SONIA HIRT

Honors Day is one of CED's most special traditions—a day in which we celebrate the outstanding accomplishments of our faculty, students, and staff and the remarkable vision and generosity of our friends and supporters. Honors Day '19 is extraordinary! Throughout this year, we mark the 50th Anniversary of the establishment of the College of Environment and Design as a single academic unit while embracing the earlier decades during which the instruction of landscape architecture flourished at the University of Georgia.

Since 1928, our faculty, students and alumni have dedicated themselves to bringing life, creativity, stewardship, and imagination to the spaces around us, shaping them into culturally meaningful and environmentally responsible places. Then and now, we lead in planning, designing, and preserving our built and natural environments.

Our year-long anniversary project includes the publication of a book, website and an exhibition, the development of branding materials, a series of high-profile guest lectures, and several celebratory events, including today's.

Thank you, all, for being an invaluable part of the CED team and onto the next 50 years!

CEDAA AWARDS AND HONORS

2019 CEDAA Distinguished Faculty Award

JAMES REAP

James K. Reap, is Professor and Graduate Coordinator of the Master of Historic Preservation Program, teaching preservation and planning law, economics, advocacy and professional responsibility, and issues in international heritage conservation. He is director of the UGA Croatia Study Abroad Program and affiliate faculty of the African Studies Institute. He has served in leadership positions on several CED and UGA academic committees. He was a Fulbright Scholar at the Jordan University of Science and Technology and visiting professor at the Orenburg Institute of the Moscow State Law Academy. In 2016, he was appointed by the President to the US State Department's Cultural Property Advisory Committee.

Professor Reap has served in a number of leadership positions in the International Council of Monuments and Sites (ICOMOS), one of the three formal advisory bodies to the UNESCO World Heritage Committee. In 2019 he received the Ann Webster Award by the US/ICOMOS, the organizations highest honor. His research includes heritage conservation in Eastern and Southern Europe, Central Asia, Africa, the Middle East, and Caribbean. In the US, he has taught law, administration and ethics to historic preservation commissions in more than 35 states and been a board member of Preservation Action, the Lawyers Committee on Cultural Heritage Preservation, and the US Committee of the Blue Shield and was a founder of the National Alliance of Preservation Commissions and the Georgia Alliance of Preservation Commission.

2019 Dean's Award of Honor

SARAH ROSS

Sarah Ross is the Executive Director of the University of Georgia Center for Research and Education at Wormsloe, in Savannah GA. UGA-CREW supports interdisciplinary research in ecology, environmental engineering, geography, hydrogeology, forestry, landscape design, historic preservation, and archaeology.

Ross is founder of Social Roots, an heirloom seed company specializing in open-pollinated vegetable varieties selected for the southeast US. She is President of The Wormsloe Foundation and Executive Director of the Wormsloe Institute for Environmental History. These foundations conduct and coordinate agricultural and environmental history research focused on Georgia's coastal landscapes.

DEAN'S AWARDS AND HONORS

2019 Dean's Award of Honor

BOB HUGHES

With over forty years of experience as a landscape architect, planner and founding principal of HGOR, Bob Hughes has been recognized for his professional and personal contributions to the growth and expansion of Atlanta's community. His experience working on significant projects, from civic and educational institutions to workplace and community-oriented developments, has allowed HGOR to be recognized with over 100 design awards in over twenty-three states and six countries. He possesses deep experience to speak the language of his clients, which heightens his ability to build consensus around a comprehensive vision, while providing innovative design solutions that are responsive to context, climate, culture and address critical issues.

Bob's commitment to the community has garnered awards, recognizing his contributions throughout the years. He has served on The Piedmont Park Conservancy for over thirteen years in various roles, including Board Chair, overseeing the 45-million-dollar expansion of the park. Bob also served on the George West Mental Health Foundation's advisory board for more than nineteen years, providing pro-bono services that established an ethos of respect through therapeutic gardens and environmental stewardship best practices. Additionally, he peruses an interest in transit-oriented design as a member of ULI-Atlanta Livable Communities Council, and a passion for viable urban green space as board member with Livable Buckhead.

As a UGA graduate in 1977 and passionate proponent of fostering the future generation of landscape architects and planners, he has been a visiting lecturer and instructor at the University of Georgia, Georgia Tech and Clemson University.

He is former president of the UGA School of Environmental Design Alumni Association (prior to the SED becoming the CED) and President of the Dean's Advisory Council for UGA's College of Environment and Design. In addition, he created the "HGOR/Richard Davis Lecture Fund" in 2001 and he and his wife Mary recently established a new Professorship at the College of Environment and Design to retain and recruit top professional landscape architects to train tomorrow's generation of designers. In 2016, Bob received the Distinguished Alumni Award for his professional achievement to the reputation and well-being of the University of Georgia.

Throughout his career, Bob's thoughtful design approach has called attention to the most distinctive natural attributes of a given place, while his collaborations and community outreach strategies have extend the boundaries of traditional landscape architecture. His dedication to investing in professional and personal growth, as well as understanding that communication is community-driven, is that to which he attributes his success and happiness.

DEAN'S AWARDS AND HONORS

Dean's Award for Teaching Innovation

BRAD DAVIS

Brad E. Davis is the BLA Program Coordinator and Associate Professor for the College of Environment and Design. In addition to recruiting and working with the BLA students as the Coordinator, Davis teaches design studios on community master planning and conservation neighborhood design, healing gardens and health design, summer travel study courses in plein air drawing and watercolor, and the CED's annual East and West Coast field trips to visit professional offices and see iconic works of landscape architecture. While he teaches a wide range of courses, he is consistently found teaching the BLA and MLA plant community and identification courses. Davis enjoys igniting a passion for plants knowledge and better more ecological planting design in the next generation of landscape architects. When not teaching in the CED, Davis can be found tending his own experimental garden and small farm, playing with his four kids, or standing at easel painting the landscape.

DEAN'S AWARDS AND HONORS

Dean's Award for Teaching Innovation

GEORGIA HARRISON HALL

Georgia Harrison Hall is the MLA Graduate Coordinator and Associate Professor in the College of Environment and Design. A registered landscape architect, Harrison practiced in the southeast for 16 years within a variety of sectors, including institutional, commercial and residential, prior to beginning her teaching career. She enjoys engaging students in challenging studio projects that balance pragmatic, aesthetic and environmental concerns. Georgia has been interested in cultural landscape research since exploring Jefferson's Monticello while pursuing her MLA at the University of Virginia. She currently focuses her research on the work of Robert Marvin, a modernist landscape architect who practiced from the pivotal years of the late 1940's until 2001.

CEDAA INCOMING PRESIDENT

CLAY STAFFORD

Clay has nearly 27 years of professional experience, with a particular focus on developing and planning facilities on behalf of corporate/commercial education, and science and technology clients. He has been responsible for work totaling more than 20 million square feet, representing investments in excess of $6 billion. Albert Einstein's famous quote "we can't solve problems with the same kind of thinking that we used when we created them" perfectly frames Clay's mission and his role as the Director of Architectural Solutions where innovative technology based design and construction solutions help clients manage and embrace exponential change. Clay has worked for several organizations, including HOK and most recently served as Director of Planning for Stevens & Wilkinson, a full-service integrated architecture, engineering and interior design firm based in metro Atlanta.

A native Georgian, Clay is a graduate of the University of Georgia's College of Environment and Design where he continues to serve as an active member of the Alumni Association Steering Committee. Additionally, he is involved with the Museum of Design Atlanta (MODA), the Georgia-Alabama Land Trust and several homeless outreach programs in the city. He enjoys almost all sports, cooking, history and travel.
